NUMB. LXXIX.

THE London Journal

SATURDAY January 28. 1720.

To the Author of the London Journal.

SIR,

IF amongst your great and masterly Correspondents, you can find Room for one who has never troubled you before, and perhaps may never do so hereafter, I desire you would insert this Letter in your Journal; for this Reason chiefly, because I would prevent any Misconstruction which may be made of some Passages in the Letter publish'd by your Brother, Mr. Mist, last Saturday; which Letter I sincerely acknowledge to be an excellent Performance. I am very glad of the Assistance of so able a Pen, and hearty Fellow-Labourer in this fruitful Vineyard; not doubting but he proceeds in this Affair upon the same Principles of Liberty, of Love to Mankind, Detestation of Oppression from Friends as well as Enemies, and of Zeal to King George, and his Legal Government, as I do; and I doubt not but he will shew it in the Course of his Letters, if he finds any more.

The best, the wisest, and the most courageous of despotick Princes, have frequently lamented the unhappy Condition into which their Greatness betrayed them. Being often born in Purple, and educated in Pride and Luxury, they seldom can have any Feeling of the Calamities, which the rest of the World suffer. They are besides, surrounded for the most Part, by the falsest, the most ambitious, and the basest of all Men; with such Mens Eyes they must therefore see, and with such Mens Ears they must likewise hear.

I cannot, in truth, see how, in the Nature of Things, it can be otherwise; For, the mean Fawnings, the servile Flatteries, the deceitful Correspondences, the base Ingratitude to old Benefactors, and the slavish Compliances with new Friends, and all the many other Arts and Treacheries, which are necessary to be put in Practice in order to rise in such Courts, or indeed to become Heads of Parties, even in free Governments, make it almost impossible for a truly great or virtuous Man to attain to those Stations.

A good Man will chuse to live in an innocent Obscurity, and enjoy the internal Satisfaction resulting from a just Sense of his own Merit and Virtue, rather than aim at Greatness by a long Series of unworthy Acts and ignoble Actions; whilst the ambitious, the cruel, the rapacious, the false, the proud, the treacherous Part of Mankind, will be ever thrusting themselves forward, and endeavouring to sparkle in Courts, as well as in the Eyes of the unthinking Crowd; and, to make themselves necessary, will be continually either flattering or distressing Princes.

Nor can it be expected that Men, who have been raised to Power by such execrable Means, should ever use it to the Benefit of Mankind, or to any good End. They will always proceed in the same Steps where they began, and use, for the Support of their Greatness, the same vile Measures by which they acquired their Greatness; till they have at length sacrificed all Things in Heaven and Earth to their Ambition.

There is a fine Passage, to this Purpose, in the short History of the Emperor Aurelian by Vopiscus. ' Et quæritur ' quidnam quæ res malos principes faciat: Jam primum, Licentia, deinde Rerum Copia Amici improbi, fictaque detestandi; Eunuchi avariffimi, aulici vel Stulti vel detestabiles, ' & quod negari non potest; rerum publicarum Ignorantia. ' Sed ego a Patre meo audivi, Diocletianum præcipere, Jam ' privatum, dixisse, nihil esse difficilius quam bene imperare ' cuiquam si quatuor reliquamque, atque unum Consilium ' ad decipiendum principem capiunt: dicunt quod probandum Et. ' Imperator, qui domi clausus est, veram non novit. ' Cogitur hæc tantum scire quæ illi inquirunt. Facis Judices ' quos fieri non oportet; auferet a Republica quos debebat ' obtinere. Quid multa? Ut Diocletianus ipse dicebat, Bonus Cæsar, optimus venditur Imperator.' Histor. August. Scriptor. Tom. 2. p. 531, 532.

My Friends, says the great Emperor Diocletian, to those who advis'd him to resume the Empire, you little know how difficult an Undertaking it is to perform the Duty of a Roman Emperor, and to reign well. The few who have Access to him, will cabal and conspire together, and unite in their Councils to deceive and betray him. They will study how to flatter him, and never tell him what it is their Duty to tell him, and what is his Interest to know, but only what they think will best please him. They will shut him up, and as it were, imprison him in his Palace; and no one shall be admitted to his Ear, but by their Leave, and in their Presence; so that he shall never know the Condition of his Affairs, or be inform'd of the Cries of his People, or indeed of any thing but what they think fit to tell him. By their Means he shall prefer undeserving Men to the best Posts of the Empire, and disgrace the most worthy of his Subjects, and the most devoted to his Interest. But why, Gentlemen, should I labour this Point any more, when even the good, the most discerning, and the best and chief Emperors are bought and sold?

But Diocletian was an arbitrary Prince, whose Will was a Law to his Subjects. But it is not otherwise in limited Monarchies, where the Prince governs his People by fix'd Rules and known Statutes, and where his faithful States have a Right to represent freely, though humbly, to him their Grievances, and by his Authority to call to account, and punish such Betrayers as we before described.

Happy therefore is that Prince, happy in the Love of his Subjects, happy in the just Applause and dutiful Acknowledgments of Millions of his Fellow Creatures, who derive their Felicity from him! Whose happy is that People, where the Constitution is so pois'd and tempered, and the Administration tion ſo diſpoſed and divided into proper Channels, that the Paſſions and Infirmities of the Prince, cannot enter into the Meaſures of his Government; where he has in his Power all the Means of doing good, and none of doing ill; where all beneficent and gracious Actions are owned to flow from his Conſent and Conſent, and whoſe inferiour Machines are anſwerable for all ſuch Conduct as may prejudice the Publick.

Such a Government does, in ſome meaſure, reſemble that of Heaven it ſelf, where the Sovereign Diſpoſer of all Things can neither will, nor do, any Thing but what is juſt and Good; who is reſtrained, by the Excellency of his own Nature, from being the Author of Evil; and will call to a ſtrict Account all thoſe who would impute their own Unrighteouſneſs to his Orders or Influence.

Such is the Monarchy of England, where the Sovereign performs every Act of his Regal Office by his Authority, without the Fatigue and Anxiety of exerciſing the troubleſome Parts of it, in his Perſon. His Laws are choſen and recommended to him by his Parliament, and afterwards executed by his Judges, and other Miniſters of Juſtice: His Great Seal is kept by his Chancellour: His Naval Power is under the Direction of his High Admiral: And all Acts of State and Diſcretion are preſumed to be done by the Advice of his Council. All which Officers are anſwerable for their Miſbehaviour, and for all Actions done within their ſeveral Provinces, which they have adviſed, or could have prevented by giving their Advice, or by making timely and humble Remonſtrances; which they are obliged to ſhew they have done.

His Leagues, his Commands, and even his Authentick Speeches, are Records. His High Office conſiſts in approving Laws, choſen by common Conſent; in executing thoſe Laws, and in being the publick Guardian of the publick Safety: And all private Orders, which are inconſiſtent with their great Duties, are not the Orders of the Crown; nor are the Actions done in Purſuance of them, the Actions of the King; but the Actions of thoſe that do them. He can do no Wrong himſelf, nor give Authority to any one elſe to do Wrong. Every Act of his muſt be lawful, becauſe all unlawful Acts are not his. He can give no Commands, as a Man, which ſhall interfere with thoſe he gives as a King. His private Will cannot controul his publick Will. His commands, as a King, his Chancellour, and Judges, to act according to his known Laws; and no private Order to do otherwiſe, can be valid.

The Nation has ever acted upon theſe Maxims, and preſerved ſuch a dutiful Reſpect to the Royal Majeſty, as never to ſuffer any Guilt to be laid to him; but has always heaped double Vengeance upon ſuch Miſcreants, as would inſinuate that their Crimes were approved or countenanced by their Royal Maſter.

Here is all the Precaution which can be taken by Human Wiſdom, to make a happy Prince and a happy People. The Prince is reſtrained in nothing, but from doing Miſchief to his Subjects, and conſequently to himſelf; their true Intereſt being ever the ſame: And the People can never have any Motive to refuſe juſt Allegiance to their Prince, whilſt the Lieutenants of the Conſtitution, a preſerved intire; that is, whilſt Parliaments are ſuffered to meet, and the Courts of Juſtice remain open, and ſuch Force is not uſed againſt them as diſſolves all Relation. All the Subjects of ſuch a Prince highly Honour, and almoſt Worſhip him. He has a vaſt Revenue to ſupport the Splendor and Magnificence of his Court at Home, and his Royal Dignity Abroad: He has the Power of diſpoſing of all Offices: All Honours flow from him: His Perſon is Sacred, and not anſwerable for any Events: He cannot be accountable for any Wrong, which he is incapable of doing; and thoſe who do it, ſhall be puniſhed by his Authority, even though it be ſuppoſed poſſible that they could, by falſe Miſrepreſentations, deceive him for enough to oppreſs it.

The Examples of Richard the Second, who, as our Hiſtories tell us, was depoſed by the Peers of his Kingdom, and of the late King James, are no Inſtances to diſapprove the Truth of that Aſſertion: For, neither of them was depoſed by his People before he firſt depoſed himſelf. No Champions for Tyranny, or Deſcendents for unlimited Dominion, have yet aſſerted that a Prince may not reſign his Crown by the Conſent of his People, when he declines to hold it any longer upon the Conditions he firſt accepted it.

Suppoſe a Prince, in any limited Monarchy, ſhould make a publick Declaration to the States of his Kingdom, That Whereas the Crown deſcended to him by the Laws of the Country, and that all the Power he was poſſeſſed of was conferred upon him by thoſe Laws; That he was bound that the Preſervation of thoſe Laws, which he had ſworn to obſerve, and the general Good of his People, were the ſole Conſiderations of his enjoying that high Dignity; And yet, notwithſtanding, he reſolved to hold it any longer on the Terms he had at firſt accepted it, and reſolved to govern; but that he now renounced that Title, and would govern them hereafter by his ſole Will and Pleaſure. I ſay, if any ſhould do this, the Advocates for lawful Power would do well to tell us, whether ſuch a Prince did not make as effectual a Renunciation and Reſignation of his Government, as if he diſſolved himſelf, and reſigned it into the Eaſt; or from Satiety of Power. And if they allow that he may do all this by Words ſpoken to expreſs his Intention, I ſhould be glad to know, from their Men of Diſtinction, why he may not do it by a Series of Actions, which will more effectually diſcover and declare his inward Intentions, and why therefore be more expended on them than any Words can poſſibly be?

I call upon the Two famous Univerſities of this Land for an Anſwer; and, till I have a full one, ſhall continue to believe, that what was done, in regard to the Abdication of the late King James, was juſt and neceſſary to be done upon the Fundamental Principles of Government; and, that all his Succeſſors ſince, have been rightful and lawful Kings and Queens of this Realm; and I particularly glory to ſay, that no Prince has ever better deſerv'd that high Title, than our preſent great and glorious Soveraign King GEORGE.

I am, SIR,

Your Humble Servant,

TIMOLEON.

FORREIGN AFFAIRS.

PReparations are making, with the utmoſt Expedition, for the forming the Congreſs at Brunſwick; and the Czar of Muſcovy has already named his Plenipotentiaries, who are to aſſiſt at it; ſo that 'tis thought all Matters of Diſference between the Muſcovites and Swedes, will, at laſt, be ſuſpended, till 'tis ſeen what Turn Affairs are like to take at Brunſwick.

The Congreſs of Cambray, we are told, is not in the leaſt Forwardneſs, it being again adjourned for ſome Time.

The Poles and the Turks are, at preſent, a little cloudy at each other; the Latter, having made an Inroad on the Frontiers of Podolia, and plundered the Inhabitants, and taken ſome Priſoners, refuſe to make Satisfaction for the Injury; upon which, the Poles have ordered their Reſident at Conſtantinople to complain to the Port, and demand an immediate Satisfaction; which, whether they may obtain, or not, or to what Extremity the Diſpute may run, Time only can ſhew us.

The Plague continues, conſidering the Seaſon of the Year, to make a ſad Deſolation in France, and rages in a very violent Manner in many Parts of it: They aſſure us, that, by the moſt moderate Computation, it has already carried off above a Hundred Thouſand People; and that, notwithſtanding all the Care and Remedies applied to prevent its Encreaſe, they have but little Hopes, at preſent, of their proving effectual, there being abundantly more Reaſon to fear this, as ſoon as the hot Weather begins again, the Diſtemper may return, in a calamitous Manner, as it has ever yet appeared in.

LONDON.

'TIS aſſured, that the King of Pruſſia hath confirmed his Promiſe of making a Tour hither in the Spring.

The Reverend Dr. King, whose Chappel in Spring-Garden was lately pulled down, is going to build another at a Place called the Five-Court in St. Martin's-Street, near Leicester-Fields.

Last Week two poor miserable Sufferers, a Man and a Woman, dying in Newgate, were carried, in the common Cart, to lay their Carcasses, as the Burying Place, behind Christ's-Hospital, and there, with 30 or 40 Boys and Girls standing, stripped (as Naked as they were Born) into a Hole; the barbarous Observance of which, in a civilized Nation, as we account our selves to be, deserves Remark, especially in such a City as this, who value our selves for being Protestants, that for want a Charge of a Three Shilling Coffin, with a little Wood, is not allowed to every such unhappy Creature. The Sheriffs of London, &c. claim a Title to all Fines and Forfeitures from all Persons culpable and convicted in their Prison, why then should they not take some Care with the Sweat, and not suffer, any longer, so unlightly a Practice, as only for Interest to life, and if they are Strangers to the Matter, it deserves their Enquiry and Amendment.

Last Monday Night there was a General Council at St. James's, in which a Proclamation was ordered to be forthwith Printed and Published, for apprehending Robert Knight, Cashier, or Treasurer, of the South Sea Company; who, after his Examination before the Committee, thought fit to fly from Justice. A Reward of Two Thousand Pounds is offered by the Government for Apprehending him.

And likewise Two French Gentlemen that were taken at a Gaming House, and committed by the Bench of Justices of Middlesex; and who had employed Council to trust Exceptions to their Commitment, but the Matter was deferred, by reason of the Absence of the Lord Chief Justice.

We hear that a Corn Factor's Servant in Water-Lane, Thames-Street, falling violently in Love with a Maid Servant of his Master's, she not fancying the Man, and to avoid his Importunity, left that Service for a Place at Woolwich; he soon hearing where she was gone, went after her, but still she continued inflexible to him, and would give him no Encouragement; this Treatment throwing him into a violent Distraction, he took a Dose of Poison, he had brought with him in his Pocket, and swallowed it, and died in her Presence.

We hear, that Orders have been dispatched from Court, to all his Majesty's Residents abroad, to solicite the Apprehending Mr. Knight, if any of them should happen to meet him.

They write from Lyons that they are afflicted with a Fever, and that, in some Houses, infested with it, 5 or 6 Persons die every Day; and as for the Plague in Provence, it rages in a dreadful Manner.

The King has been pleas'd to grant a Pension of a Hundred Thousand Livres to Mrs. Law, in Consideration of the great Service done to his Majesty by her Husband, who, we are told, is to treat with the Imperial Court for the Dutchy of Brabant, in Favour of the Duke of Chastres, who is to have One of the Dutchess in Marriage; but we shall wait for a Confirmation of this, before we give entire Credit to it. The Actions on the India Company, alias Millisippi, are all to be converted into Rent or Annuities, at the Rate of Two per Cent. per Ann. provided the Proprietors can prove that they had those Actions, in Payments of their Debts, from the Government; otherwise 'tis intirely lost for them: And 'twas said that a Company of Merchants at St. Malo were to have the same Privilege granted to them as the Millisippi Company enjoyed; and 'tis thought they'll make a better Use of them, being they understand better what belongs to Trade.

The Bank Notes of One Thousand Livres are fallen to Sixty Five Livres. Fifteen Persons were seized, as they came out of the Chappel of the Dutch Ambassador at Paris; most of them are in Prison, where they are like to pass their Time very indifferently.

The Flight of the Cashier of the South-Sea Company, and his Deputies being taken into Custody has thrown them into such Confusion and Disorder, at the South-Sea House, that the Treasury there is shut up, and a Stop put to the Payment of the Interest on their Bonds.

The Right Honourable Patrick Lord Oliphant, of the Kingdom of Scotland, formerly a Captain in Colonel Arthur Gray's Regiment of Foot, in Ostend, his Lordship being the Last of the Family, the Title is become Extinct.

It is said, that Mr. Guy, the Bookseller in Lombard-street, has given the Sum of Twenty Thousand Pound, towards the building an Hospital, to adjoin to that of St. Thomas in Southwark, for the Maintenance of the Incurable. 'Tis said he has no Family, and had eighty thousand Pound original Stock.

On Wednesday his Majesty came to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to an Act for altering and amending the Laws, for obliging Ships coming from Places infected, to perform their Quarantine; and for preventing the spreading of Infection.

 To prevent the Publick being impoſed on by Counterfeits, The true Royal Chymical Balſam, as it was from the firſt Author, without the leaſt Grain of Mercury, or any Thing prejudicial, highly recommended by thoſe that uſe them, for Beautifying the Hands and Face, and making the Skin ſo ſoft and ſmooth, as not to be paralel'd by Waſh-Powder or Cosmetick, &c. And is a real Beautifier of the Skin, by taking off all Deformities, Tetters, Ringworms, Morphew Scurfs, Pimples, Pits or Remains of the Small Pox keeping it at a laſting and extreme Whiteneſs. It ſoon alters red or rough Hands, and is admirable in Shaving the Head, which not only gives an exquiſite Sharpneſs to the Razor, but ſo comforts the Brain and Nerves, as to prevent catching Cold; and is of a graceful and pleaſant Scent. It is Sold by Mrs. Lambert, Glover-ſeller, at the Corner of Pope's Head Alley in Cornhill, over-againſt the Royal Exchange; the ſame Shop where it has been Sold above 30 Years; And at Mr. King's Toy-ſhop in Weſtminſter-Hall. Price One Shilling each, and Allowance by the Dozen. Beware of Counterfeits.

 Whereas I Charles Mapp, Maſter-Taylor dwelling at the Sign of the Coach and Horſes, near Clerkenwell Church, have been for the ſpace of 5 Years, very much Afflicted with the Cholick, but ſince Michaelmas laſt was Twelvemonth much more violently, my Diſgeſtive Faculty being ſo depraved, that I generally Vomited up the greateſt part of what I Eat or Drank; and being alſo troubled with the Stone and Gravel, I was for the moſt of that time confin'd to my Bed: I made uſe of Five of the moſt eminent Phyſicians, but found little or no Relief; but my Caſe growing Deſperate and Hopeleſs I being look'd upon as a Dead Man, in the Eyes of my Phyſicians, and moſt that ſaw me, I apply'd my ſelf to Mr. JOHN MOORE, Apothecary at the Peſtle and Mortar in Aldchurch Lane, London; who in a ſhort Time cured me of my aforeſaid Maladies; for his Medicines I paid him, to be under no Obligation to publiſh this, but for the Good of others.

September 16, 1720. Charles Mapp.

 The Sanative Elixir, whoſe Noble Effects have been ſo long experienced, and made greatly famed, for the real diſcovering, abſolutely eradicating, and ſafely and ſpeedily diſcharging the whole Maſs of Blood, and Parts, of all the Symptoms and Effects of the Venereal Diſtemper, and reſtoring and eſtabliſhing a ſound and laſting State of Health, without the Fallacy or Diſappointment, ſo cuſtomarily found in Medicines advertiſed, is continued to be ſold in Half-Guinea Bottles, ſealed up, with full Inſtructions, ready to be delivered to any Meſſenger ſent by the Author, Mr. MARTEN, Surgeon, who is removed from Hatton-Garden, to Prujean's-Court, in the Old-Baily, near Ludgate-Hill, where he is daily to be adviſed with, as uſual.

This Day is publiſhed,

Observations on the Spleen and Vapours: Containing remarkable Caſes of Perſons of both Sexes, and all Ranks, from the aſpiring Director to the humble Bubbler, who have been miſerably afflicted with thoſe melancholy Diſorders ſince the Fall of South-Sea, and other publick Stocks; with the proper Method taken for their Recovery, according to the new and uncommon Circumſtances of each Caſe. The Whole digeſted by way of Journal, and accommodated to publick Uſe. By Sir John Midriff, Knight, M. D. Medicus ad Inſpiciendum Mentes.——
Printed for J. Roberts, in Warwick-Lane. Price One Shilling.

Dr. Tomſon's famous ſovereign Spirit of Venice Treacle, chymically prepared by John Clifton's Widow, and no other Perſon, which certainly cures the Cholick and Vapours; is of excellent Uſe to ſuch as go Abroad early, and a great Preſervative againſt all Contagious Diſtempers, eſpecially the Plague. To be Sold by Wholeſale or Retail, at the Archimedes and Globe, the Corner of Exchange Alley, in Cornhill; and by Retail, at Mrs. Rowe, at the King's Arms under the Exchange-Gate, againſt Bartholomew-Lane; at Mr. John Paredaile, a Perfumer, againſt Northumberland-Houſe, near Charing-Croſs; at Mrs. Hardings, in King's-Head Court, Fiſh-ſtreet Hill, near the Monument; and at Mrs. Bowles's, a Milliners, next Door to the Spur Inn, in Southwark, and at Mr. Boards, at the Butcher's Arms, at Camberwell. Price One Shilling the Bottle, with printed Directions.

 Wright's Diuretick or Cleanſing Tincture, which Univerſally diſcharges all the Feces or putrid Relicks of the Lues Alamode, or Venereal Infections, and chaſes its Concomitants, the wretched Train of that complicated Diſtemper, as all mucous, ſilthy ſanious Matter lodged in the Reins, or ſpermatick Parts, which either cauſe a Sharpneſs in the Urine, or too frequently provoke it. This Relick is diſcoverable, partly by ſubſequent Symptoms, viz. by a Debility, or Weakneſs of the Back, a fœtid, nauſeous, and veering Smell of the Urine, with a purulent Matter, or feculent Sordes reſiding at the Bottom; or flying in it, with variety of Figures. Further, this Tincture effectually carries off all Relicks of the Venereal Diſeaſe, after ill managed Cures, not only cleanſing the Urinary Paſſages of all Sand, Gravel, Films, or membranous Pellicles, &c. but after a ſingular Efficacy, invigorating the Reins, reſtoring them, and all their Genital Parts, their Original Tone and Uſe, tho' the Miſtimure and Decay be of the longeſt Date, with an equal Succeſs in each Sex. To be had of Dr. Wright, for Ten Shillings per Bottle, with Directions for its Uſe, only at his Houſe at the Golden Head in Bell Savage-Yard on Ludgate-Hill.

Steel Spring or jointed Truſſes for the Cure of Ruptures, eaſie to new born Infants, and effectual to the aged: Perſons in the Country ſending their Bigneſs, and which Side the Rupture is, may be ſupplied with the Truſſes, and proper Directions, by Peter Bartlet, at the Golden-Ball in St. Paul's Church-yard, near Cheapſide, London. His Mother Mrs. M. Bartlet at the Golden-Ball over-againſt St. Bride's Lane in Fleet ſtreet, is skilful in this Buſineſs to her own Sex. Her Steel Spring Truſſes, for Ruptures at the Navel, are not only more effectual, but eaſier than thoſe made without Steel.

The late Dreadful PLAGUE at Marſeilles compared with that in London, Anno 1665, in which died above 100,000 Perſons, Carts continually going about London Streets to fetch away the Dead Bodies, the Carmen crying out, Bring out your Dead. Bring out your Dead. Together with the Method of Cure uſed in thoſe who Recovered in London, not One having Died that uſed it; publiſhed then by the College of Phyſicians, by the expreſs Order of the King and Councils; with Rules for its Prevention and Cure. This Book is given Gratis, (for the Preſervation and Benefit of all Perſons who may at any Time be where this terrible Marſeillian Infection may reach) only up one Pair of Stairs, at the Sign of the Celebrated Anodyne NECK-LACE, Recommended by Dr. Chamberlain for Childrens Teeth without Temple-Bar, and no other Place. And where, as long as they hold out, every Family may have one to keep up them againſt the Day of Affliction and Time of Need. Note, 1. Theſe Books will not be given to any Boys or Girls who may pretend to be ſent for them. Note, 2. If ſuch a Book as this had but been Given away in Marſeilles, that every Family might have had one, ſome Thouſands of Lives might have been ſaved, whereas now 'tis computed that out of every Eight in a Houſe, 7 there periſhed, moſt for want of Help.
